AIDS and women Watch out for

Dear Editor,

Very few women came through the doors when we first opened the CARES AIDS clinic in 1989. The AIDS epidemic had not largely moved to women. Five years later, more than 150 women have come to us for services. We expect that number to grow-here in Sacramento and across the nation, women are among the fastest growing groups of HIV +. In the U.S., AIDS is now the leading cause of death for women of childbearing years.

To better respond to the unique medical, social and psychological needs of women CARES has opened a Women's Clinic.

During this time, women can: Have their regular physician appointments. Our female physicians are AIDS specialists and able to focus with sensitivity on the special needs of women; receive psychological support and counselling from professional staff on site; receive and discuss educational literature or watch videos; Meet other HIV + women and network for support. Dear Editor,

People should be cautious before responding to appeals from charities. Right now, a group called Heart Support of America is asking for money for its "Door-to-Door Heart Drive". As president of the American Heart Association, Golden Empire Division, I am concerned that people are confusing Heart Support of America with the American Heart Association. The materials look similar to the American Heart Association's Door-to-Door Drive materials but there is no connection.

According to Heart Support of America's own literature: 10% of the money raised this year will go to charitable purposes. By comparison, the American Heart Association will spend 76% for charitable purposes including lifesaving research and educational programs. Please make sure your donation goes to the intended agency.

Sincerely, Larry Cox, Board President, American Heart Assoc. Golden Empire Division

Editor's note: MGW Newspaper is investigating the so-called AIDS Action League which is using a similar methodology to that employed by Heart Support of America. Watch for stories in future issues.

Request for cruising stories

Dear Editor,

I am a gay sociologist at Indiana University conducting research on how single sexually active gay men cruise. I'm requesting anecdotes, real-life stories, thoughts or philosophies about cruising. Can you help by sending me your experiences?

I want to find out about the nature, methods, techniques, etc.

Any experiences, thoughts or information you send me will be greatly appreciated. In collecting this information, I hope to learn about an important aspect of our lives. I am asking for anonymous replies (tell me only your age and city you live in) and all information you send me will be treated confidentially.

Keep your dollars here

Dear Editor.

I'd like to comment on the Eton of Sweden Egyptian shirts advertised in the last issue of [MGW Newspaper, Vol. 17, Iss. 236., Mar. 1 1994]. The shirts carry the words "stop AIDS" woven throughout the fabric, and are being sold for $225 by Bergdorf Goodman in New York as an AIDS fundraiser. While this is a wonderful idea that offers an additional avenue for bringing visibility to the crisis at hand, I'd like to strongly encourage any MGW readers who can afford such a shirt to please consider keeping your AIDS dollars in the local community to help us meet the needs of the many here whom we personally care for, and care about.

food for people with AIDS from the monthly Share Program. I'd much rather hear that folks in our community sponsored four people and fed them for four months than hear that they are wearing this shirt. I don't think people in Sacramento understand how many of the people affected by this epidemic have absolutely nothing to eat — that every time we blow $14, someone could have eaten for a month. This amount of money, or any amount for that matter, donated to CARES could help pay bills for people who can't afford their treatment and medication. It could be used by Hope House or the AIDS Foundation's home health nurses for our end-stage and home-bound folks. It could help Sacramento's new NAMES Project chapter of the Memorial Quilt maintain an affordable storefront to offer assistance to Sacramentans in creating a fabric memory for loved ones lost — a safe place for talking about the devastation and getting information on how to forestall its continu-

Please consider keeping your dollars here. Ask organizations you give your money to exactly how their general donations are used, and let them know if you have a specific preference within the organization for the use of your dollars. We are surrounded by "AIDS fundraisers." Make sure your money is spent the way you want it spent.

Legal test filed against new military law ambda Legal Defense Fund and the American Civil Liberties Union have filed suit in federal district court in Brooklyn, challenging the recently enacted federal law and Department of Defense regulations excluding lesbian and gay men from serving in the U.S. Armed forces.

The lawsuit, Able v. U.S.A., was filed on behalf of six servicemembers, ranging from a lieutenant colonel to a petty officer and includes two active-duty service members who live in the federal judicial district covered by the court in Brooklyn. All of the plaintiffs wish to continue to serve their Lambda and the ACLU seek to have both the new law and the final Department of Defense regulations found unconstitutional.

"The central promise of our Constitution is that all Americans are guaranteed the right to be treated equally under the law; to be judged on the basis of their abilities rather than according to the prejudice of others," said William B. Rubenstein, Director of the ACLU's national Lesbian and Gay Rights Project. "Our goal is to force the government to Beatrice Dohrn, Legal Director of Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, said: "Contrary to the government's characterizations, the new law and policy subjects lesbians and gay service members to a system of rules under which they are punished for who they are. This in itself is antithetical to

After receiving assurances from the Justice Department that no action would be taken against the plaintiffs in the cases—Federal Judge Eugene Nickerson determined that a temporary restraining order against the government was not necessary. Judge Nickerson scheduled a hearing on the plaintiffs' request that a preliminary injunction distinction serves no legitimate and rational government or military interest, the plaintiffs claim, but is based solely on the prejudices and presumed prejudices of heterosexual service members and civilians.

The papers argue further that the statute and regulations "burden, chill and circumscribe" all public and private speech that would tend to identify service members as lesbians or gay men in violation of the First Amendment. Similarly, the papers argue that the Act and regulations hinder the rights of gay and lesbian service members to expressive and intimate association.

"The report by the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force is very welcome news. While the number of incidents of andgay harassment is still too high, a decline of 14 percent is a significant move in the right direction.

"I was particularly pleased to note that one of the main reasons given for the decline, in the report, is enhanced is precisely what I hoped to accomplish when I introduced States Senate. Paul (240), Denver (229), Chicago (204), and Boston (187). Because of underreporting by victims, it is estimated that these figures reflect only a fraction of the actual number of incidents that occurred in the six urban areas last year. Evidence in this report shows that in one community a significant percentage of victims did not report their incidents because they fear public disclosure of their sexual orientation.

Anti-gay arson was the most serious form of offense to increase this year. Arson rose 200% from 2 incidents in 1992 to 6 in 1993. Vandalism also rose 10% from 141 incidents in 1992 to 155 in 1993. Bomb threats increased 8% from 13 > incidents in 1992 to 14 in 1993. Harassment-personalized, confrontational incidents in which lesbians, gay men, and bisexuals are intimidated face-to-face, on the phone or by mailrose 35% from 1230 incidents in 1992 to 1665 in 1993.

Reports of threats and menacing dropped 9% from 667 incidents to 605. Physical assaults, or gaybashing, fell 16% in the six cities from 848 incidents in 1992 to 710 in 1993. Robberies declined 28% from 85 to 61. Reports of police abuse dipped 36% from 248 to 161. Anti-gay murders fell 50% from 14 to 7. Murders in which the victim's sexual orientation was one of several factors declined 25% from 24 to 18.

Only 322 anti-gay crimes were reported to local police in six cities. Police reports declined 14% in 1993 from 375 crimes in 1992.

The decline in anti-gay episodes could reflect a variety of factors: increased outreach by lesbian, gay, and bisexual crime prevention education programs, greate vigilance against anti-gay violence by local law enforcement officials, and enhanced penalties in local hate crime

Intolerance fomented by far right operatives may have contributed to anti-gay violence. Denver victims documented a 12% surge in homophobic incidents during 1993 in the wake of the passage of Amendment 2, an anti-gay ballot initiative. And in New York City advocates noted a surge in anti-gay incidents after a very visible

Get a rise in politics

There is a highly successful fundraising effort for women political candidates called EMILY's List, which stands for "Early Money is Like Yeast." The group selects candidates very early in the election cycle; candidates with good positions on the issues and reasonably good chances of winning in key races. The list targets women supporters and raises vital dollars when they make the most difference: at the beginning of a race for office when the candidate needs to demonstrate economic viability and gain exposure in order to raise more money to win.

Lesbian, gay and bisexual people need to realize that our money can also provide the early winning edge for candidates, and we must make our first candidate of choice Delaine Eastin, who is running right now for State Superintendent of Public -Instruction. Balloting will be in June.

FALSET TOS

From The New York Times

have little doubt that you will cry tears of heartbreak at Falsettos, the William Finn/James Lapine musical ... But long before the story it tells — a story of friends, lovers and families in the age of AIDS — takes the turn that is so rending, you may find yourself crying for another reason — because artists are at work and their artistry is pure and beautiful.

From Bay Windows (Boston)

alsettos mixes themes of hope and doom in equal measure and celebrates the capacity for caring and the communal spirit.

Critical favorite sure to enlighten, inspire, entertain

It's playful and as exuberant as a child's trip to the playground, and moves with a dexterity and speed that's breathtaking in its simplicity.

[It] sings with unabashed candor about a variety of contemporary subjects — alternative families, gay relationships, troubled adolescence, AIDS.

Falsettos celebrates "family values," not the kind Dan Quayle and Pat Buchanan espouse, but the sort that liberal America has long stood for — diverse and inclusive. Certainly, American musicals have long expressed those values, so Falsettos isn't all that different, just part of the same continuum, and one that, at long last, provides a deeply moving mantra for our troubled times.

From QW (New York City)

from curtain-

t a time when history-making is ugly in the extreme, Falsettos is history made in harmony, the first Broadway musical to put homosexuality on centerstage up to curtain call.

Falsettos is a high point for gay theater in the tradition of Torch Song Trilogy, with the same kind of precision wit, ready savvy and wealth of warmth, and the same point: We want it all too.

After a love story that survives AIDS — even if the lovers don't — it came to me that the unhappy myths of old, like the legend that gay love can't last, might not have been if, all along, we'd had many Falsettos.

From San Francisco Bay Times

urn off that VCR and go see Falsettos. It's funny. It's sad. You'll have a good cry. William Finn and James Lapine's Tonyaward-winning musical is witty, facile, breathlessly directed, movingly acted and ultimately emotionally stirring. It's unlikely we will ever see a more topically tragic theme utilized for the libretto of a Broadway musical.

For once we get a contemporary musical about something.

From The Washington Blade

inn's music is breathtaking, ranging from the frantic energy of "Love is Blind" and "Jason's Bar Mitzvah" to searing, soaring ballads which reveal the characters in all their agonizing and defiant vulnerability.

His incisive lyrics are the perfect match to his music, with existence.

sharp wit cutting through the characters' protective wordplay and drawing out their real thoughts and emotions.

Falsettos brings an honest and moving portrayal of contemporary Gay life to the stage, and shows Gays in the full context of their extended families.

From Variety

o label this a musical about gay life in modern times is to shortchange its tremendous appeal as a masterly feat of comic storytelling and as a visionary musical theater work.

From The Bay Area Reporter

his breakthrough show is a theatrical event of great and enjoyable importance.

The depiction of gay men and lesbians, realizing amidst their grief and pain that love transcends sexuality, makes Falsettos so affecting.

From Private Lives

itting on-target with timely socio-political issues that touch many bases, this musical doesn't rely on special effects or gimmicks to awe the audience. Rather, a very direct approach to what is happening in a riveting manner that grabs the audience and never once loses them.

Finn and Lapine reintroduced audiences to something called the human family. Bloodlines asunder, this family is comprised of and defined by love, responsibility, and feelings of those people, outside the conventional family circle, that are part of everyday existence.

CAP/PAC plans awards dinner

he California Capital Political Action Committee (CAP/ PAC) announced details for the organization's 6th An (nual fundraising dinner. This year's event will be held Saturday, May 7 at 6pm in the Metropolitan Room of the Sacramento Convention Center.

Traditionally, the dinner program has included local entertainment and both a live and silent auction. This year, in addition to the vacation packages, works of art, gift certificates and dates with elected officials which have made the auctions so popular, the dinner committee is negotiating with professional acts to provide the evening's entertainment. In addition, this year's dinner program will be followed by a dessert buffet and a treat for the ears as disc jockey Melonnee Desiree' Pagano spins a diverse mix of musical styles.

A keynote address is also planned as part of the program. In past years, luminar-

"Heather has a differing family structure?"

New York City's multicultural "Children of the Rainbow" curriculum continues to be gutted by the bigots who have railed against it for the last two years. The original guide included Heather Has Two Mommies and Gloria Goes to Gay Pride on a recommended reading list and suggested that younger children should be taught to respect all people, including gays and lesbians. A revised version of the guide has recently been distributed for review and it omits nearly all references to gay and lesbian parents and makes no mention of these affirming

Pigs and prejudice

A recent "Media Watch" column noted how ironic it is that "piggy" Rush Limbaugh used his TV show to suggest that lesbians and pigs were cross-breeding in Mississippi. The Animal Rights Connection (ARC) has objected to this use of the "piggy" adjective.

"To use an animal as an object or image of scorn reflects a bias no different in concept than heterosexism (or racism, sexism, ageism, et al)," writes ARC's Baron Miller. "Pigs are sensitive, gentle beings who harm no one, "he adds, "and due to their inability to prevent it, they are victims of a hideous and universal oppression which should rightly appall every freedom lover. We hope this helps you understand why calling Limbaugh 'piggy' is unnecessary, inaccurate, and unfair to pigs."

Express yourself

Major advertisers continue to reach out to queer America through the pages of Out magazine. American Express has become the latest corporate giant to buy ad

April and May issues of Out will feature the "American Express Travelers Cheques for Two" campaign. Significantly, American Express will alter the well-known campaign, changing the names on the checks from a male-female couple to a same-sex couple.

Encourage American
Express to continue advertising in Out and to seriously consider supporting the many other weekly and monthly publications that enrich the lesbian/gay/bisexual community. Heartless radio

A Valentine's Day report on National Public Radio's popular program All Things Considered offered up several stories of people involved in long-term relationships. In a classic case of defamation by omission, the reporter interviewed straight couples only, suggesting once again that romance is exclusively heterosexual. Send corrective comments to *All Things*Considered, National Public Radio, Box 96600, Washington, DC 20090-6600.

No condom sense

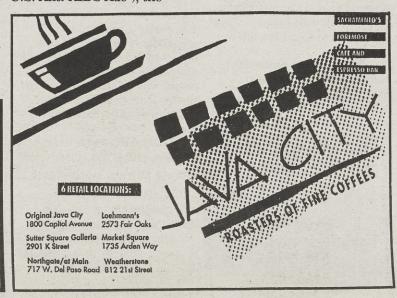

The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and the Clinton Administration have launched the first federallyfunded AIDS prevention campaign for radio and television, despite massive opposition from the "Religious Right."

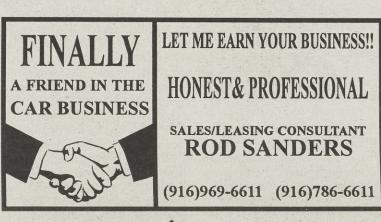

Missing from the ads altogether, however, are any images of (or references to) lesbians, bisexuals or gay men. Quoted in a recent Advertising Age article ("Gay's are MIA in the Latest U.S. Anti-AIDS Ads"), the CDC's chief marketing/Media official, Melissa Shepard, defended the campaign's approach.

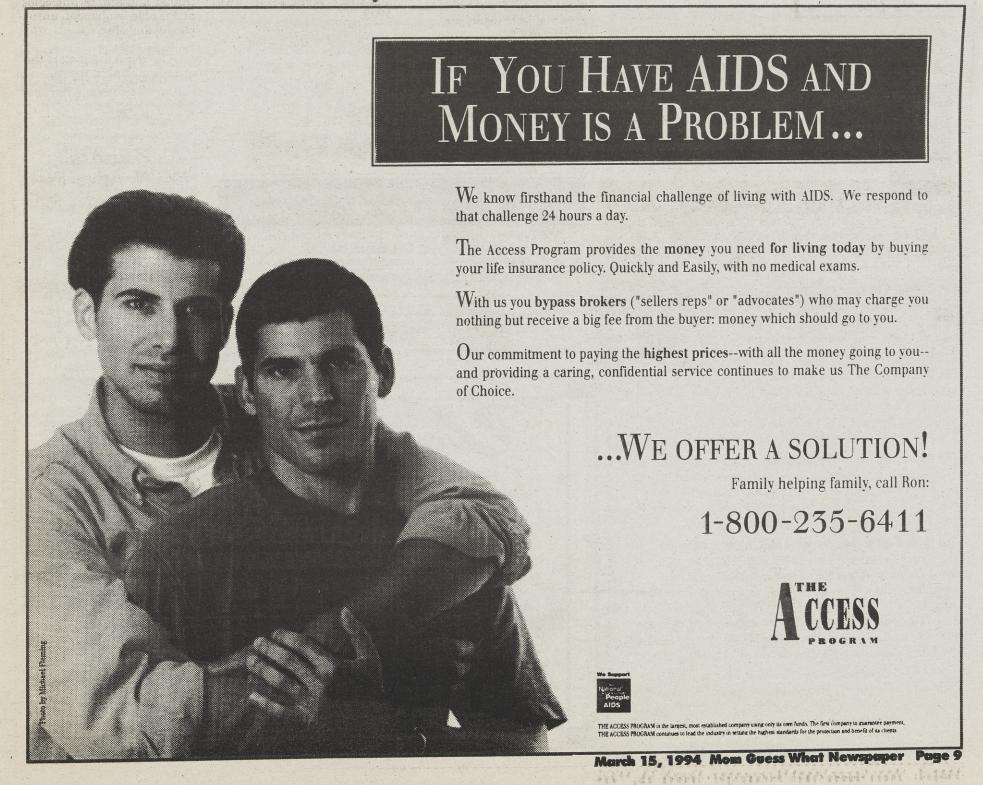

"Not showing gay men doesn't mean we're not targeting them." Straight couples are included in the new series of 13 ads, by the way.

While no one is suggesting that the CDC ought to reinforce notions that AIDS is a "gay disease," it is clear that lesbians and gay men deserve health messages that specifically address our needs and experiences. A kiss is still a (heterosexist?) kiss

The much-awaited "lesbian kiss" episode of Roseanne finally beamed across the globe. The program had become mired in controversy following reports that ABC intended to censor the episode. Series producers Roseanne and Tom Arnold began a media blitz and the television network ultimately supported airing the show.

It's unclear whether a kiss between a woman playing a lesbian character (Mariel Hemingway) and a heterosexual woman (Roseanne Arnold) is even a "lesbian kiss." The scene brought an undoubted message of hope and affirmation to young and closeted viewers across the country who rarely see portrayals of same-sex affection.

The program confronted homophobia. Roseanne's character took a good (and funny) look at her own insecurities. Fearful of being labeled "gay," Roseanne says to her lesbian friend Sandra: "I am not gay! I didn't mean for that to sound like it was bad or anything, you know, because if I was gay that would be just fine, but I'm not gay. So I just don't like people calling me things that I'm not, like 'a hypocrite' or 'gay,' you know, because I'm not. And I wouldn't like anybody calling me like ... ummm ... like an 'astronaut.' Because it's fine to be an astronaut, but see I am not an astronaut."

Roseanne admits she was wrong and hopes that her lesbian friend Sandra won't think of her as "not cool" because she is uncomfortable with the "gay" label. Sandra replies: "I'm not comfortable with everything about you either. Every time I think about you and Dan in bed ... Yuck!"

A tag scene at the end of the episode showed Roseanne and husband Dan in bed. Roseanne tells Dan that she had been kissed by someone else; Dan is upset until he learns that the "other man" was really a woman. His anger turns to arousal, and the scene offered a self-critical commentary on the mainstream media's willingness to exploit lesbian sexuality for the benefit of heterosexual men.

To let ABC know what you thought of the episode, contact Edward Harbert, President, ABC Entertainment, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, LA., CA 90067, 310-557-7777, fax 310-557-7160; Roseanne Arnold, Executive Producer, Roseanne, Carsey-Werner Co., 4024 Radford Avenue, Bldg. 3, Studio City CA 91604.

And a bigot is still a bigot

The controversy surrounding the "lesbian" Roseanne episode has been deemed a "publicity stunt" by some critics. TV Guide's critic, Harry Stein, argues that Roseanne Arnold's campaign to get the show aired was nothing more than "extortion, and could, under slightly different circumstances, get the perpetrator tossed in prison." In his March 5 essay titled "Do We Really Need to See Roseanne's Latest Kiss?," Stein suggests that lesbian love is offensive to the "tolerant traditionalists.

To suggest that homosexuality is strictly a matter for clinical treatment is nothing but blatant, antiquated homophobia. In his professed concern over the impact of what is "pumped into America's homes," Stein ignores the fact that our television sets pump out heterosexism and homophobia. Decades of such televised bigotry have taken a terrible toll.

To criticize this critic, write to TV Guide, Box 500, Radnor PA 19088. If you want your letter considered for publication, copy it to the attention of the "Letters Department."

A fax from Phelps

In a press release issued after his failed "picket" of Randy Shilts' funeral, the "Reverend" Fred Phelps—the homophobe from Topeka, Kansas—claimed that he and his Westboro Baptist Church congregation "kicked fag butt in fag Frisco." Said Phelps: "WBC gave Filthy Fag Randy Shilts a proper send off to hell Feb. 22 by preaching the Gospel to his butt-buddies at his lying funeral. It was a great day for the cause of God and Truth!

In actuality, Phelps and his hateful family demonstrated for all of 30 seconds before they turned and ran. In his press release, Phelps also vowed to "sue Mayor Frank Jordan" for the right "to picket famous fag funerals."

Phelps has been getting considerable media coverage, milking the TV talk show circuit. Talk show hosts should not shy away from showing the face of homophobic hatred, but it would be nice if they spent more time investigating Phelps and his lunatic church instead of treating him as a "guest" or (even worse) an "authority."

If you want to communicate with Phelps himself, write: Westboro Baptist Church, 3701 West 12th St. Box 1886, Topeka, KS 66604, 913-273-0325.

Shame on Two

Most of the mainstream media provided fairly good coverage the "Reverend" Fred Phelps and hateful demonstration at Randy Shilts' funeral. Television station KTVU (Channel 2) on the day of Shilts' funeral invited Phelps and was interviewed by host Ross McGowan.

Channel 2 provided air time for homophobia while completely failing to include the voices of lesbians and gay men.

Complaints to Fred Zehnder, News Director, and Rosemarie Thomas, Producer, Mornings on 2, KTVU Channel 2, Box 22222, Oakland, 94623, 510-834-1212, fax 510-451-2610. amon "Hate Can Stop Here-Rescind the Resolution.' That's the message carried on a billboard unveiled in Cobb County, Georgia. The advertisement is a response to a Cobb County Commission resolution, passed last year, that condemns lesbian and gay citizens. The Cobb County Board of Commissioners declared that "gay lifestyles" are incompatible with community values. The Board also restricted arts funding to (heterosexual) projects or groups that promote "family-oriented standards.'

Gay Games IV & Cultural Festival A Rainbow of Business Opportunities

15,000 athletes, 5,000 cultural festival participants and 500,000 spectators are coming to New York this June for the Gay Games. If you want to take advantage of this $100+ million market, you should call us today to discuss the powerful promotional vehicles we're offering:

Unity '94 Unity '94 Brief, the Games newsletter, reaches upwards of 50,000 Games supporters. It's the best way to reach the Games audience now. Ad rates range from $275 to $1250. There are only two more issues before the Games, so act now!

The Official Souvenir Program, a perfect-bound, 4-color publication of Out magazine, will contain a history of the Games, athlete profiles, and articles on lesbians and gay men in sports. 75,000 copies with a cover price of $4.00. Ad rates range from $745 to $3000, excluding covers.

The Games Guide, produced by HX, will be a black-and-white guide with a complete schedule of events and listings of clubs, restaurants and stores. 100,000 copies distributed free at Games venues. Ad rates range from $475 to $3500, excluding covers.

The Games Business Partnership is a powerful program combining advertising space in the Games Guide, listings in Unity '94 Brief, a discount coupon book and an attractive window sticker. The best way for a retail business to support the Games. Levels from $600 to $5,000.

The Unity Center Merchandise Fair, open to the public at Pier 90, the enclosed, air-conditioned central location for Games information, registration and ticketing, offers booth space in 8' x 10' increments. Open from June 16 to June 25, with daily traffic of 25,000+, the Merchandise Fair is the best way to sell directly to Games participants and spectators. Food and beverage booths (no alcohol) are $6,000; general merchandise booths are $5,000.

For more information on these and other opportunities offered by the Games please contact Andra-Nina Davis at 310-546-7887.

The fourth in the Madison McGuire espionage series, is not the best to date, but it is entertaining and important to the saga of the lesbian CIA agent, Williams is a craftsperson with words.

She moves the level of Naiad publications to that of Bantam or Dell with her style and ability. It is kind of her to stay with a woman's press when her work is capable of reaching, entertaining and pleasing a greater audience. This book would sell out in a week if were marketed in the world beyond a feminist press.

The Spy in Question is set in the times that we live in. Glory Days

Reviewed by Elisabeth Pyle MGW/Staff

Glory Days Rosie Scott, Seal Press, 1989, 244 pages, $8.95 paperback.

Set in New Zealand, this novel is written like an Antonioni film, through a glass darkly, never real, no sunlight on the pages, riveting and bleak.

Glory Day is a Maori nightclub singer/painter who lives in a world of bikers, poofs, a mongoloid child and gangster ex-husbands.

There seems to be no sunrise at any point in the novel, only twilight and darkness. Day's life follows a strange track of intertwining her past to her future when she becomes the care-giver for a young punk druggie after a set at a local club, delivers the girl to a hospital where she dies. Glory is plunged into the Auckland drug world and finds her life threatened by an obsessed model.

Part of the International Women's Crime series by Seal Press, this novel is of far greater literary quality than the meager offerings of Naiad or mainstream press.

The strength of Scott's phrases to describe by omission make this rerelease a must read by anyone who prefers writing to story-telling.

The narrators attempt to unravel the mystery of who was Rebecca, to find the family treasure and to discover her own identity, is a powerful novel full of fundamentalist hate, seduction, kidnapping and murder.

Excellent for the twist at the end and the plot development. You owe it to yourself to read a well constructed plot that you will never be able to guess the outcome.

(If you do figure this one out before the ending, drop me a note at MGW and tell me what gave it away, I was clueless.)

Thumbing through the pages, you will find old familiar names and faces. I was pleased to re-discover the artistry of JEB, who I always thought of as our Matthew Brady, chronicling the '70s and '80s at music festivals, demonstrations and at home. I have raised questions, for example, about the wisdom of removing Alice Walker and Annie Dillard stories from state classrooms. I believe that any effort by any group to foster the kind of thinking that could cause society to be less tolerant is unacceptable, so I will support gay and lesbian teachers in California. The only criteria for teachers should be if you have the ability and credentials to teach. These are the only things we should concern ourselves with.

Babbitt expands equal opportunity

U.S. Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt issued the following memorandum:

I want to re-emphasize my personal commitment to a goal which ensures equal opportunity for all Americans. To enhance that goal, the Equal Opportunity Policy is expanded to include sexual orientation as it relates to all matters of employment.

We will not condone discrimination based on sexual orientation within this Department. We recognize the importance of selecting the best possible person for the work to be done and for providing all Americans with equal employment opportunities. All Interior employees deserve and must be given respect so that the work place is free of intimidation, fear, and other counter productive elements."

Leaders trained to fight initiatives

In Washington, D.C. the Gay and Lesbian Victory Fund recently held the first national training for community leaders fighting anti-gay ballot initiatives. More than 30 community leaders from 11 states attended.

In the past two years, the radical right has devoted a growing share of its extraordinary resources to promoting anti-gay ballot initiatives throughout the country. According to Brian Berquist, of an Idaho group fighting to keep the language off the ballot, "The reason the radical right gave for attacking gays and lesbians was that we were powerless and would be easy to beat. This training will prove just how wrong they are.

Community leaders from Oregon, Michigan, Montana, Idaho, Missouri, Maine, Florida, Ohio, Arizona, Washington and Nevada attended the training and shared the tactics, strategies and lessons they have learned from their local initiative battles. "This weekend took a huge step toward providing the hands-on, nuts-and-bolts training we need to win a ballot-initiative campaign," says Leah Edelman of the Privacy Rights Education Project in Jacksonville, FL. Bureau Chair opposes gay marriage

A Hilton Hotel official was condemned for his coordination of anti-gay testimony at state legislative hearings on same-sex marriage. NGLTF demanded in a letter to Baron Hilton, Chairman and CEO of Hilton Hotels, that he publicly repudiate the anti-gay actions of Dieter Huckestein, Regional Senior Vice-President.

Huckestein, who is also chair of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau, organized efforts to present letters in opposition to same sex marriage. Daniel Dinell testified and identified himself as "assistant to Dieter Huckestein, who in his capacity as Chairman of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau has received letters from around the country expressing their strong opposition to same sex marriage." The hearings were held in the Hawaii House Judiciary Committee, regarding H.B. 2312, which limits marriage to male/female couples who have the ability to procreate. The bill was introduced by Judiciary Chair Terrence Tom in response to a decision by the Hawaii Supreme Court last May that declared the prohibition of same-sex marriages unconstitutional.

It is unclear whether Dinell or Huckestein were acting independently or on behalf of Hilton Hotels. Info: Evie Blackwood, Hawaii Equal Rights Marriage Project, 1820 University Ave. Suite 8, Honolulu, HI 96822; 808-942-3737.▼

Episcopal Dioceses back gay rights

At their annual convention the Episcopal Dioceses of Washington, DC and Newark, NJ reaffirmed their support of the rights of lesbians and gay men both within the Episcopal Church and in society at large and called on the national convention of the Episcopal Church meeting this summer in Indianapolis to do likewise.

Both dioceses have ordained openly lesbian and gay clergy and both diocesan bishops have been threatened with censure because of their support.

The Washington Diocese addressed two issues, calling on the National Episcopal Church to guarantee nondiscrimination based on sexual orientation in the "life, worship and governance of this church," and asking the church to support the addition of sexual orientation to the 1964 Civil Rights Act or similar federal legislation. Both resolutions were put forward by Integrity/Washington and passed easily.

Quarterly highlights research

The Gay and Lesbian Quarterly is a newsletter containing highlights of recent psychological and medical research on sexual minorities. The newsletter summarizes research studies. Statistical jargon is omitted, and emphasis is placed on describing the background and purpose of the study, its findings and its conclusions. Seminary lets gay couples cohabit

An Episcopal divinity school is opening its seminary housing to same sex couples despite church policy declaring that sex is appropriate within marriage only.

Unmarried heterosexual couples are still prohibited from living together on campus.

The new policy was prompted by a lesbian professor who filed a complaint with the New York City Commission on Human Rights after being told that living with her partner in seminary housing violated school policy. The complaint had not been settled when the trustees approved the new policy.

Court bars initiative

The Florida Supreme Court blocked Florida's antigay initiative from the 1994 ballot.

Arizona, Idaho, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, Oregon and Washington have antigay, pro-discrimination measures filed and radical right groups are currently gathering signatures. Colorado, Montana and Ohio face possible threats.

Anti-gay bias charges probed

Brawley Union High School student Emilio Cardenas, 16, has criticized officials for not acting on his complaint of abuse because he is gay until after he contacted a newspaper.

Cardenas said one teacher directed a disparaging term for gays at him in front of a class. The other treated him rudely, resulting in trouble with other teachers, he said.

Cardenas claims he was beaten by another student Dec. 2 in a locker room because of the teacher's attitudes. The student who beat him was expelled.

Administrator's say the teachers will be disciplined if the allegations are true. They deny delaying an investigation. Cardenas submitted a letter Dec. 14 to Vice Principal Bud Smith detailing the incidents. Smith did not begin an investigation until early January.

Fjell to host women's music retreat

The sixth Northern California "Women Making Music Retreat" will be held Friday, Apr. 8 through Monday, Apr. 11, at Bishop's Ranch near Healdsburg. The retreat is directed by performer/teacher Judy Fjell, and is designed to offer a supportive and educational atmosphere for women of all musical abilities. Also on staff at this spring retreat will be fiddler Crystal Reeves, rounds singer Kate Munger, and guitar and dulcimer teachers Peggy Morgan and Bette Phelan.

Workshops include a variety of vocal workshops, including several for beginners. Instrumental instruction is available in beginning guitar, mandolin, dulcimer, violin, harmonica, and intermediate guitar, and classes will also be taught in songwriting and dance. Sessions are led by the professional staff as well as volunteers attending the retreat. There is also time scheduled for women to share original songs, "jam" together, and learn new repertoire. Quake-relief package bars anti-gay bias

With two words inserted into the California earthquake assistance package that President Clinton signed into law the federal government has for the first time banned discrimination on the basis of 'sexual orientation" in a federal program.

"It's an important event in the sense it's the first time Congress has added this category to the list of protected groups," Said William Rubenstein, director of the National Lesbian and Gay Rights Project of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The ban is limited because it applies only to the $8.6 billion in disaster relief

Denver victims documented a 12% surge in homophobic incidents during 1993 in the wake of the passage of Amendment 2, an anti-gay ballot initiative. And in New York City advocates noted a surge in anti-gay incidents after a very visible far right campaign to remove any mention of lesbian, gay and bisexual families from a local school curriculum. Victim advocates in Washington, D.C. noted an unusual rise in homophobic episodes in the weeks before and after the April 25 March On Washington for Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Equal Rights and Liberation. The Klanwatch project of the Southern Poverty Law Center noted that reports of homophobic murders doubled in them, Examples of anti-gay violence and victimization

Sacramento's recent gay related murders and other incidents of anti-gay violence were not unusual as compared nationwide:

On January 7, a Latina woman leaving a Washington, DC gay bar was accosted by a man who crudely described how he would make her have sex with him. The man shot her point blank in the face, killing her.

A teenager dragged a 55vear-old Vietnamese man to the rocks on Laguna Beach. kicked him with steel-toed boots and beat him unconscious on January 9. The teen admitted driving to Laguna Beach looking for gay people

The Tampa, Florida home of an HIV-positive lesbian AIDS activist was burned to the ground on April 24, while she attended a national march for gay rights. The activist received numerous threatening phone calls prior to the arson.

Oregon Citizen's Alliance supporters distributed a flyer in the Salem, Oregonpublic library in early 1993 calling for the execution, castration, and imprisonment of lesbians and gay men. The flyer called on its readers to demonstrate their "love" for gay men by slashing their throats and allowing them to bleed to

Two men who admitted stalking "faggots" shot a gay man and robbed him of his wallet when he stopped to help them with their car in Wichita, Kansas on January 12. The shooting left the man a quadriplegic.

A man hiding in the back seat of a car forced a lesbian to drive to a field near Woodhaven, Michigan, and raped her on October 14. During the attack, the man said, "This should teach you not be a queer...It's wrong ... This is what you need."

on November 6.

On December 2, three men forced a gay man into a car at gun point in Tyler, Texas, drove him ten miles away, and shot him at least 15 times, killing him. The three men boasted that they had assaulted and robbed several other gay men.

A woman who dressed, acted, and talked like a man and dated women was murdered on December 31 in Humboldt, Nebraska. One of the men charged with her murder stripped her in public on December 24 to prove she was a woman, then kidnapped and raped her.

Violence and the far right

After the passage of Colorado's Amendment 2, an anti-gay ballot initiative, far right groups waged and won campaigns for similar initiatives on the ballot in Cincinnati, Ohio; Lewiston, Maine; Portsmouth, New Hampshire; and several cities and counties in Oregon. Initiative backers in all four campaigns asserted that the initiatives sought only to prevent lesbians, gay men, and bisexuals from gaining "special rights" and "protected minority status." Despite claims of not being "anti-gay" per se, initiative backers blanketed communities with homophobic distortions, half-truths, and lies. Far right operatives circulated literature and videos that portrayed lesbians, gay men, and bisexuals as degenerate, privileged, sexually perverse, and subhuman.

So far in 1994, far right organizations have filed language for anti-gay ballot initiatives in seven states-Idaho, Oregon, Arizona, Missouri, Michigan, Washington, and Nevada. Several of these states have at least two things in common with the 1993 campaign site—a lack of anti-violence resources and well-established neo-Nazi and white supremacist bases of activity.

The 1992 experience in Colorado and Oregon demonstrated that anti-gay ballot initiatives foster intolerance and harassment. Unless community leaders, public and church officials, and citizens of conscience decry the prejudice, hate mongering, and discrimination will continue to be advocated by the far right.

Government and community action

In 1993, progress in countering hate violence at the Federal, state, and local levels leapt forward. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously that states may enhance penalties for hate crimes when it is proven that the assailants chose their victims because of their race. religion, sexual orientation or other target status (Wisconsin v. Mitchell).

After the Supreme Court's decision, the Federal Hate Crime Sentencing Enhancement Act was introduced and passed in the House of Representatives. The Act was introduced as an amendment to the omnibus Crime Bill in the Senate and passed as well. The Senate version awaits passage of the full bill.

The states of Washington and Texas both enacted hate crime penalty enhancement laws that include sexual orientation bias. The state of South Carolina ordered its law enforcement agencies to begin collecting data on hate crimes against lesbians, gay men, and bisexuals.

Recommendations

Passage of The Hate Crime Sentencing Enhancement Act.

Re-authorization and increased funding for implementation of the Hate Crime Statistics Act.

Passage of state and local laws to curb anti-gay violence.

Passage of local, state, and federal laws prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and repeal of laws that seek to regulate private, consenting sexual behavior among adults.

Repeal of state and local laws banning protections against discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation;

Mandatory training programs for all law enforcement personnel to ensure competent and sensitive handling of bias crimes:

Required educational programs in the schools, churches, and wider community to counteract anti-gay prejudice.

Vigorous condemnation of anti-gay prejudice and violence by leaders in government, religion, education, business and the media.

Condom ads.

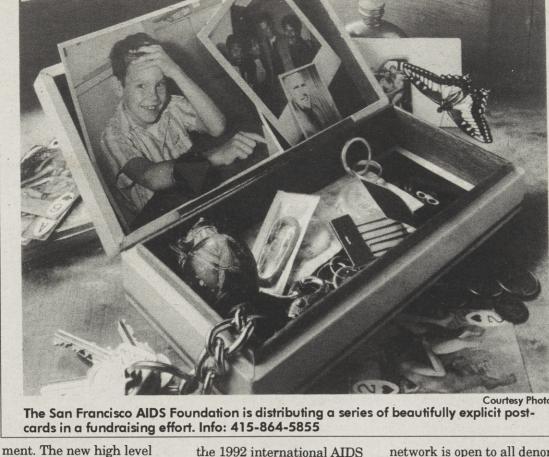

Condoms have come a long way over the last five years, but AIDS experts want more. Public service TV announcements (usually run late in the evening) tell people that condoms are highly effective in preventing HIV when used consistently and correctly, but most people don't really know what this means. AIDS groups say it's time now to get more specific. The ads don't mention the fact that HIV can pass through natural skins, and that condoms must be used only with water-based lubricants because oil-based lubes cause latex condoms to disintegrate. It's wrong, they say, for the federal government to lead people who are unfamiliar with HIV into believing that the use of all condoms under all circumstances will protect them from virus transmission.

Savage Nights...

Hot on the heels of Philadelphia, a second movie about AIDS—this one a savage look at unsafe sex-is now playing in San Francisco. Savage Nights (a French film with English subtitles) is a raw, in-your-face look at the deceptions and moral indecision of a bisexual with AIDS who refuses to let his HIV status affect his relationships with his partners. He continues rough, unprotected sex with men and, after confessing his "little white lie" to a young woman he's having an affair with, she screams at him but finally decides that to prove her love, she'll continue to have sex without a condom. The film looks at how these young people come to realize that their unrealistic quest for a carefree youth must give way to the reality that their future holds for them. Its honest portrayal of the anger and fear that go along with getting sick make it a poignant, tragic movie.

National Task Force...

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala has named the 18 members of the National Task Force on AIDS Drug Develop-the 1992 international AIDS conference from Boston to the Netherlands. President Clinton said he would end the policy, but has been unable to get the change through

Congress.

Interfaith Network

An answer to our prayers? Nearly 80 individuals representing a dozen religious denominations got together recently for the first meeting of the Interfaith Network, an outreach effort to bring a positive spiritual view regarding the AIDS epidemic to thousands of Sacramento church-goers, and to address the misinterpretations and manipulations of scripture resulting in fear, bigotry, and judgments. The information and resources exchange network is open to all denominations, and network leaders hope the number of participants will grow. The February meeting included workshops on AIDS awareness, as well as a display of the NAMES Memorial Quilt put together by the new Sacramento chapter. People with HIV or AIDS are invited to attend future meetings to share their needs and concerns with church leadership; call Warren Burns at 393-5367 for info. Next meeting is at 7:30 pm, Thursday March 17, at Pioneer Congregational Church, 2700 L Street.

American Airlines wakes

Following a November incident in which a man with AIDS was forcibly removed from an American Airlines flight at Chicago's O'Hare Airport because he had visible KS lesions, the airline has agreed—as part of a lawsuit settlement brought against them by Tim Holless-to conduct sensitivity training designed by AIDS activists for about 25,000 employees, including flight attendants and gate agents. The airline says, "We try to ensure that all our passengers have a safe and comfortable flight regardless of their physical condition, and we thank Mr. Holless in helping us do a better job in that regard." Holless was admitted to the hospital shortly after the incident and died January 1another hero of the epidemic who found the strength at the very end of his life to demand a change that makes a difference for us all.

reviously: Adam had complete recall of his ordeal with Michael. He realized he was not raped.

It was in May of '88 when I finally felt like myself again. Therapy had helped. I'd been in college for almost a year and enjoyed it. I had formed a group of friends, all of which knew about and accepted my homosexuality

Sherry and I seemed to be getting along well, although she had been fired from her job and had trouble keeping a job since she moved in; she was now a month behind in rent. Alicia, on the other hand, was my rock. We saw each other every day. She found a better job at a convalescent hospital near my house and worked from midnight to 8 in the morning. I picked her up from work in the morning and we would go out to breakfast.

It was late in the evening when I sat alone one night. It had been a long day and I was getting ready for bed. Sherry was with her boyfriend. The phone rang and I answered "Hi Alicia," because she was the only person who called that late.

"This is not Alicia," a female voice said. I did not recognize it.

"Oh, sorry. Uh, who is this?

'It's me Marilyn, I don't want to fight. I've just been thinking about you and wanted to see how you were. I have missed you."

It was strange, but we talked like old friends, she apologized continually for all that had happened. We somehow ended by making

It was nice talking to her, and after all our great times together I did miss her, too. I still couldn't get past the final days end, her intentional betrayal, but I felt that the conversation would be a clean ending to our friendship. I wanted to end it neatly.

I had no intentions of being her friend. I had hoped that would be that, but days later she kept calling me. I was nice and did not want any more bullshit, yet I didn't want to be her friend. I felt as though she was doing well and I might mess things up again.

I couldn't help but ask Marilyn about Jack. She told me he was fine and did not hate me. She had confessed to him what she had done. I wondered after that why he never called me. I asked her: she explained he was embarrassed, and also had seen the photo of Alicia, and did not want any trouble. I laughed.

The following day I was working when Marilyn entered the store. I was cordial as we talked, then she mention that "we" were driving around and thought "we" would drop by. I inquired "Who is this 'we'?"

"Me and Jack," she said. My heart dropped. My hands began to sweat.

"Would he talk to me if I went out there?" I couldn't help but ask.

"Sure," she answered. I wanted to run, but paced myself, not wanting to appear anxious. There he was in all his glory. His dark hair piled in tightly styled curls on the top of his head. His face was smooth and aquiline. A smile peeled across his face as I approached. I will never forget that smile; it was a smile I knew I had seen thousands of years ago, and it lighted a fire in me again. I could feel the blood in my veins. Somehow I knew the smile was only the beginning, but I knew it was a beginning.

I was amazed how strongly I felt about him. In the back of my mind I always knew he would come back. I loved him and believed I had known him in another life. It was undeniable.

We all talked and scheduled a visit after I was off work. They arrived at my house long after the sun had gone away. They entered and were full of compliments of how nicely the place turned out. They asked if I had ever heard from Frank the ghost. We sat and reminisced about this time and that, when we painted that and scrubbed this. It was a nice meeting.

Marilyn decided it was time to go, and started out the door. Jack stopped me in what I like to call the foyer. It was never like the foyer in his house, but it was an entry way before reaching the front door.

"I want to see you," poured from his mouth like poetry. "Without Marilyn around."

I set up a date for the next day. It was our little secret. To be continued...▼

Hemophiliacs lose ground...

The death rate of people with hemophilia (males with an impaired blood clotting factor who need transfusions of a clotting component called Factor VIII to prevent internal bleeding) tripled between 1979 and 1989, bringing the average age of death down from 57 to 40, primarily due to AIDS. Their lifespan today is nearly the same as two decades ago, when modern treatments were not available. The introduction of HIV into their blood supply in the early days of the epidemic resulted in a reversal of all the progress that had been made in the 1970s in extending the lifespan of hemophiliacs. More than 80 percent of the 17,000 Americans who have the most common form of hemophilia became infected with AIDS prior to 1984, when advanced blood screening techniques started safeguarding the nation's blood supply. About 20 percent of their spouses are now also infected.

New look at vitamins...

Experts are looking again at evidence that higher-thannormal doses of certain vitamins-A, C, B1, and niacin-may delay the onset of full-blown AIDS in people with HIV when started early in HIV infection and when taken for at least two years. The 7-year study clearly links nutrient intake to the progression of HIV, and resulted in a 40 percent drop in the number of cases that quickly progressed to AIDS in the 281 men studied at Johns Hopkins Medical Institute. During the study, researchers also discovered that high doses of dietary zinc appear to elevate the risk of disease progres-

Report from Westminster

By Joan B. Guertin MGW/Staff

he 118th Annual Westminster, Championship, All-Breed Dog Show is now history. It drew 2500 dogs from all points of the U.S. with 148 breeds and varieties represented. It was seen by more people than any other dog show in the world thanks to live coverage by the USA Network.

Every dog entered was an AKC Champion of Record, so the viewing audience saw the creme de la creme of the canine world. Following the Best in Show, the top dogs in each breed compete in each of seven groups, those dogs then come together for the final competition. Most were worthy winners though politics may have played some role.

The audience was treated to a vision of just how their dream dog might appear:
Altana's Mystique, a crowd favorite for Best in Show, gave breed lover's a view of what a German Shepherd should really look like and how the breed should move.

Fox Mead's La Belle
Sauterelle, a Petits Bassets
Griffon Vendeens sailed around the ring, flying on her stubby legs and grinning from ear to ear. She begged for the top spot but was awarded second. This is what competition is all about.

Of course, by now everyone knows that the Best in Show was the Norwich Terrier, Chidley Willum The Conqueror; a charming dog that showed with style. The thrill for me was being in the press area taking in all the color, able to see all of it, the best...and the rest.

Dog Show headquarters is Madison Square Garden in New York City. Although the Westminster tradition is linked to the Garden it is evident that the show has outgrown its home. Having showed at the San Francisco Cow Palace the weekend prior, I had an opportunity to compare the two show sites. The differences were dramatic. The Cow Palace has wide aisles and ample space for visitors. The Garden's space is limited and the benching area is congested. The crush of people there precluded even conversation. A benched show affords the viewing public a chance to see and learn about different breeds. An unbenched show requires only that dogs be available during their posted times. In this area, Madison Square Garden falls short as a suitable venue.

My traveling companion, Joan Gibson Reid (fellow Corgi breeder and owner) with her husband Ray of Picadilly Farms boarding kennel in Elk Grove, came home from the show with a bronze Award of Merit on her lovely bitch, The Trollop.

Also, fellow Sacramentan and Malemute owner, Margaret Cleek picked up a Certificate of Merit from Dog Writers for her excellent op/ed piece in The Sacramento Bee and I received a pair, one for these columns. We didn't do badly.

Be sure to visit the 3rd Annual Breed Showcase at Premium Pet, Greenback and Auburn, put on by The Sacramento Council of Dog

MGW/Joan Guertin

A young Afghan looks forward to his turn in the ring at the Afghan Specialty just prior to Westminster.

Clubs, on Sunday, Mar. 20 from 10am to 4pm, it will afford the public an opportunity to gain valuable education about the dog fancy.

Also on board will be performances by The Unique Bully Brigade, The Bulldog Drill Team, Bill Scott and his Border Collies in Stock Dogs in Action, as well as other events that show what dogs enjoy doing.

From the platter of the Positive Gourmet...

Dishing from the heart

By Candie Leigh White MGW/Staff

hat do you do when the very people you are fighting to save become your least supportive allies? This is an all too common occurrence among members of the human race. This is the tragic reality that Thomas Vasques encounters in his efforts to make those living with AIDS live more comfortably.

Although AIDS is not a gay disease, the fact that it has touched the lives of so many gay men and lesbians, there is a perception that we are doing all we can to alleviate the pain and anguish that befalls those afflicted with the disease.

had AIDS and would certainly die. When visiting a hospital in Ft. Lauderdale for pneumonia symptoms, Vasques was told he should deal with the fact that he had AIDS and prepare for the inevitable. Although Vasques was not tested for HIV, his attending Rob Thorbin and Thomas Vasques preparing dinner at the Hope House.

Unfortunately this is not the case, at least in Sacramento, according to Vasques.

Two years ago Vasques, along with his lover and some friends, started the Positive Gourmet. Vasques wanted to give back to others a little of the fortune he had acquired in his life, particularly to those with AIDS. Vasques was moved by an incident in which he was told he himself physician assumed Vasques' symptoms were the result of AIDS-related opportunistic infections. He was later diagnosed by a lung specialist who told him his symptoms were not AIDS-related at all. Vasques said the fear and loss of hope he experienced during this ordeal brought him to a different level of awareness, one which has called him to do all he can to help others.

The Positive Gourmet brings dinner to the residents of Hope House on the last Saturday of the month. Residents are asked what special meal they would like and then Vasques, with a small army of volunteers, prepares the meals. In addition to the dinners, Vasques and others provide friendship, a surrogate family and even eulogies or last requests for residents. The food service is offered as a completely voluntary non-profit venture. Vasques said all of the volunteers take money from their own pockets to cover expenses. The Positive Gourmet has managed to survive in this manner, but Vasques would like to do more and said it is not possible without financial help.

Vasques is attempting to start a food closet to deliver food to housebound people suffering with AIDS. As of yet there has been no such service in the Sacramento area. Vasques believes that part of the reason for the lack of such services is a general air of apathy among the gay community. Vasques believes the gay community has the unreasonable expectation that the government and non-gays eliminate the AIDS epidemic while gays themselves are unwilling to do anything. Vasques said if you're not volunteering five hours a week then you're wasting your life.

MGW writer Guertin wins award

t the recent Dog Writers of America Awards banquet held in New York City in conjunction with the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show, Sacramento area writer Joan B. Guertin received recognition for her work with pets and pet writing.

Her columns appear under the title, Pet Talk in MGW Newspaper. Guertin also was honored for an article titled The Valley Pet. current President of the Sacramento Council of Dog Clubs, has an extensive writing background having been a high school English MGW Newspaper pet columnist Joan Guertin was honored for her work by the Dog Writer's Association of America. She accepted her award at the Westminster Dog Show in New York.

The 59 year-old DWAA gives recognition annually to dog writers across the U. S. and Canada.

Entries are judged by a panel of their peers with recognition going to the top three entries in each of 46 subcategories in six primary categories. The top entry in each sub-category receives the treasured "Maxwell" medallion named after noted dog writer, breeder and judge, Maxwell Riddle.

Guertin, a local dog trainer, canine behaviorist and teacher and for 15 years and an entertainment industry press agent. However, until her friend and 1993 contest Chairwoman, Gina Spadafori, Sacramento Bee Pet Columnist and former recipient of a Maxwell, urged her to join DWAA and the competition, she had never given any thought to competing. Explains Guertin, "It was a thrill to be recognized by my peers, and exciting to be in New York to pick up the award in person."
